A Scapegoat

TT is to be hoped Canada doesn't agree with a UN against South Africa because of the latter's racial policies. Previous federal governments have refused to support this form of vendetta against the Union and the present one would be wise to follow suit.

Senctions of this rature accomplish no good.

They accretate the situation, they fail of their purpose, and above all they inflict hardship on millions of innocent people.

One suspects also that these attempted boycotts of South Africa are in the main simply to exorcise a feeling of guilt among their sponsors, aided and abetted by the Afro-Asiatic group now in numerical strength

Who is there at the UN who is in a position to cast the first stone? Few if any. The Charter to which all pledge lip service—it often seems nothing more—calls for equal human rights in nations large and small. More than the apartheid policies of South Africa fall within this ambit. The very African nations now burgeoning in independence have their own forms of apartheid, except that these are invoked against the white man and are buttressed by impris-onment without trial, a denial of a free press, and tyranical rule over their own native people

Immigration laws are a form of apartheid. So are the repressions of the Iron Curtain nations, strangely looked at with a blind eye at UN headquarters. If a scapegoat is to be found there are many others beside South Africa due for attention.

In any case the philosophy of the UN should be to persuade nations which violate the Charter not to attempt punishment where none of the judges have a bona fide sheet themselves. This simply hardens the attitude of the chosen offender, and in the case of South Africa in particular there should be in Canada especially some measure of sympathy and understanding for an old-time Commonwealth partner in the dilemma which its racial problems present. No one would dream of a boycott of the U.S.A. because of its apartheld difficulties, yet these are but a microcosm of the larger situation which embroils the Union.

Governments do not last for ever, and the road to a change in national policies lies in conciliation, not in a revenge tinged with unction and hypocrisy. The Diefenbaker government was sadly at fault in leading the forced withdrawal of South Africa from the Commonwealth, thus abandoning a country which had been its valuable and close ally in two world wars and withholding the helping hand which it might have offered to its kith and kin in that country.

Our own nation is not free of racial difficulties even if these loom as of minor scale by comparison, and it should refuse again to join in a parade of retailation which is one-sided and takes no account of Charter violations elsewhere.

New Broom

THE Victoria police commission would seem to have found in RCMP Staff-Sgt. J. F. Gregory a man of ample calibre for the job of rearganizing the city force in the next two years as its chief constable.

Although younger, at 43, than some might expect the successful candidate to be, the new chief is by no means short of experience. Twenty-four years with the old provincial police and the RCMP should have fitted him with a wealth of practical knowledge, in addition to his formal training. His youth, indeed, will likely be an advantage in terms of energy, and especially if as is said to be distinctly possible he remains head of the department after the reconstruc-

Staff-Sgt. Gregory's British Columbia background leasing, too, as is the evidence of his associations in Prince Rupert, where he is second-in-command of the RCMP subdivision, that he is a man who recogflizes community responsibilities beyond the sphere of his own professional work.

Seeking a new broom to sweep clean, the police commissioners were well advised to make the selection from the ranks of complete outsiders. It would be a more difficult task for a man with established friendthips in the local force and perhaps prejudices, and the new chief will be able to regard the department with a more discerning eye for being strange to it.

With this in mind, it might be suggested that the commission should neither peer over his shoulder nor guide his hand a whit more than is absolutely neces-fary when he assumes his post. He has been given a challenging job, and ought to have all reasonable freedom to do it as he sees fit.

In Rampant Style

WHEN it comes to the autumnal football season W Victorians subdue their parochial instincts and become enthusiastic British Columbians. This will undoubtedly be amply proved again when, frustrated by lack of a late ferry, they flock to the theatre to watch the B.C. Lions on television instead of sitting in person in Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

The Lions, too, were our Island guests during their season training at Courtenay, and it is meet therefore that we send them off in pursuit of the Grey Cup

True it is that for nine years this trophy has eluded them, and they have flattered only to deceive by resembling too closely the recumbent pose of the mountain figures after whom they are named. This year, we are promised, things will be different, and they are raring to rise in the rampant style that befits any real lion.

We wish them well as they embark on this annual football odymey.

'Freud' Patterson Dwells on Defeat

Copley News Service LAS VEGAS - The challenger for the heavyweight boxing championship is so preoccupied with self-analysis that some of the newspapermen have started referring to him as "Freud" Patterson.

Any sensible man preparing to fight
Sonny Liston would admit the possibility of defeating Liston would be odds-on against a wounded grizzly or a famished tiger. But Patterson gives the impression he is concerned with the probability rather than the possibility, of losing to Liston in

Monday night's rematch. Patterson is superbly conditioned and he cuts an exciting figure in the gym. He's experienced, knowledgeable and the speed of his punching is dazzling. Liston seems slow and almost ponderous by way of contrast. But Patterson's remarks offer little comfort to those who fancy his chances. He dwells so much on the subject of defeat that even his most fierce partisans come uneasy.

"If I lose and lose badly, I'll step back

Patterson is a maze of contradictions. On the one hand he says he is confident of regaining the title a second time, on the other he admits he has brought along his glasses—in the event he fails. "I wouldn't want to show my face," he explains, because the Patterson is aggrieved press does not regard him with awe, yet says he has no hope of being remem bered as a "great champion." "I am not looking to become a great champion," he explains. "It's not important, it's secondary. I have proved myself to myself, that's enough. I was the youngest to win the championship. I was the first to win it back.

"I love boxing and love everything around it. But I can walk away from boxing with plenty of money and security. If I tried to become a great champion, it would be greedy."

The surest way for Patterson to earn lasting recognition in the sweet science would be for him to twist the tail of the big, ugly bear" in the air-conditioned pit known as the Las Vegas Convention Center. Though he's been champion only 10 months, Liston already is regarded as kind of a superman; he frightens other pugs as his idol, Joe Louis, used to scare them. If Patterson can whittle him down to the size of a mere mortal there'll be no question about his place in the history of fun and games.

SLOWPOKE LILAC-(F.R.C., Esquimalt). I am not surprised your double white lilac, planted two years ago, hasn't bloomed yet. Lilacs often take three or four years after planting before they start to bloom, and there is very little you can do to hurry them up.

A little extra potash might help to encourage flower bud forma-tion; I suggest sulphate of potash, 1% tablespoons per gallon and two gallons per square yard of rooting area extends out a little beyond the spread of the branches and most of the important feeding roots are near the outer perimeter of the circle.

DYING PANSEES-(G.B., Sidney), as you say, a careful examination of the roots of your dying panales shows no sign of root pests, about the only other thing I can think of is a feature infection of the soil called pythium violae. This causes the leaves to turn a sickly yellow first, then brown and dead.

I den't knew of any untisfactory centrol for this infection; I suggest you scrap your pansies, dig over the site, then water deeply and thorough-ly with a household disinfectant such as Creolin, Creocide or Jeyes Fluid, two tablespoonfuls per gallon. Do not replant until fall and then do not at-

CLIMBING STRAWRESSURS .. (W.J.McS., Victoria). The so-called climbing strawberries such as Son-jana, Skyscraper and Mount Everest do not climb of their own accord they have to be tied at intervals to canes, netting or a trellis. Really, about the only differences between these and the conventional varieties are the facts they make extra-long runners and these runners bear fruit the same year they are formed.

This constant tying up of the run-ners is a lot of work, and actually, they do just as well if not better trailing on the ground. If you wish to increase your stock, they must be grown in contact with the ground so toria). The strangely malformed elematis flower you sent me is the result of a doubling of the stamens and sepals, causing what is technically known as a petaloid condition. Weedkil'er fumes have not been known to cause this deformity, but sometimes it occurs as an inexplicable freak.

The vine will not necessarily produce similarly malformed blossoms next year, but if it does, you may as well dig it up and discard it,

LATE-SOWN WALLFLOWERS -(A.A.McQ., Duncan). The reason for the poor bloom on your wallflowers is because the seed was sown too late in the year. When you save seed from your plants, it is better to delay sowing until the following year for, by the time the seed is ripe, the season is too far advanced for sowing. For best results, sow wallflower seeds during late May and early June for blooming the following spring.

The British censor has Sir Arthur Rank annoyed because he will not pass The Party's Over. It's about the black jacket set in Chelsea and one scene features an affair with a dead girl! The censor approved the script but will not pass the picture, and I don't blame him.

Sam Bronston of Madrid has made a new rule: "No picture of mine will cost more than $10,000,000. There has to be a limit." , , . And some of the top producers in Hollywood have banded together to make a new salary rule. Stars like Marion Brando, Cary Grant, Rock Hudson and Kirk Douglas will be paid $350,000 and 75 per cent of the profits. I believe the million dollar salary is yester-day's news, even for Elizabeth Taylor. Three-hundred-fifty thousand dollars and a big share of the profits, if any, seems more reasonable.

France Nuyen, honeymooning here with Dr. Thomas Morrell, told me. "I will continue to make pictures, but I reserve the right to have a baby." Her only request on arriving in London, "No twin beds, we don't believe in them." Obviously.

Storling Hayden has his first important role in five years in Dr. Strangelove. Stanley Kubrick, who has read it, told me that Hayden's autobiography. Wanderer, is brilliantly written. Knopf is publishing it in September. "It could start an entirely different career for him. He is now writing a next. He has never really cared for being now writing a novel. He has never really cared for being I remember thinking this when the bronzed blond New Englander first came to Hollywood just before the war, made a picture with Madeleine Carroll and

A beautiful cast is in the works for Metro's Bleak House. In addition to the divine Margaret Eutherford as Miss Flyte, Sir John Gleigud will play the lawyer, Mr. Tulkinghorn, and they hope for Susamaah York for the role of Esther. Larry Buchman, MGM executive boss in London, is testing Los Angeles actress Barbara Werls. She may have a role in William Holden's Americanization of Emily, but not as Emily. Pat Neal, so excellent in Hud, will be co-starring here in Psyche 59 with Curt Jurgens.

Eve Arden was lunching at Caprice with husband Brooks West. "I thought you were living in Italy for a year," said this reporter. "After several months in Rome, we are looking for a house in London and when the four children-go back to school here in the fall, we'll get back to work." But in Europe, not Hollywood. "We may stay here forever," said Eve, enthusiastically. I have heard this before before an English winter.

That sexy voice you will hear in Dr. No does not belong to Ursula Andress. She was redubbed in London by a German actress with a flawless American accent. Ursula's tones were considered too normal for the seductress she plays . . . It is more understandable that in The Pink Panther Claudia Cardinale will have someone else speak her English dialogue . . . and there is still some question about Kim Novak's Cockney accent in Of Human Bondage.

Sir Carol Reed's daughter Tracy has the only woman's role in Dr. Strangelove with Sterling Hayden and Peter Sellers. She wears a brief Bikini. Some photographs have already been published in the British papers. But Sir Carol has asked, "No more." Too undignified, I gather. But if you are not half naked, or altogether so, in a European picture today, you might just as well pack up and go home.

Children Learn To Paint

During the summer months the Greater Victoria Art Gallery holds classes for youngsters ranging in age from four to 15 years. The young students are given projects in using oils, pastels, mixed mediums and water colors. Their subjects run from still lifes to imaginative design.

It is felt greater enthusiasm and interest is shown during the summer months than in winter classes, for in the latter an hour of painting is perhaps not so welcome after a long day in school.

Teachers are careful not to restrict the natural creativeness of their pupils, but rather they give helpful criticism and guidance. With the very young children especially, there is little attempt to give any formal training. They are allowed to discover how to express themselves through line and color.

Happily cutting out colored paper for collages are seven-year-old Nancy Okros, left, and Kristin Nickells, six, who are pupils in the six-week summer school course for children at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

tricks with each of the following holdings in dummy ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ a. Lead low from dummy to the jack. The only hope is that the right-hand opponent has ace queen

b. Lead low from dummy to the jack. The right vay to finesse because it wins against doubleton or trebleton queen on the right. c. Play the king, followed by the jack for a This is slightly better than an immediate finesse of the jack, which should be played if the right-hand opponent seems likely to have length in the d. Lead to the king or jack. If it holds, return to dummy for another low lead. This works against any 3/3 split and also against a doubleton are on the right. e. Play the king and then enter dummy to lead towards the jack. This is a safety play which ensures four tricks unless all the five missing cards are in one

f. Finesse the jack immediately. If this wins, declarer probably needs a 3/2-split, but he has the extra chance that right-hand opponent may have the BRAKE SHOES

Capt. Webb was First to Swim the Channel but

NIAGARA KILLED HIM

Excited hundreds lined the river banks, agog for the thrill to come. But their eager chatter was lost in the great roar that rent the air for miles around, stifling all other sound.

It was the roar of falling water: the crashing, continuous thunder of Niagara.

In the hissing, boiling hell at the foot of the mighty American falls, a local ferryman's boat appeared. It was rowed out warily into the pool of quiet water that lies between the hase of the enta-rect and the rapids.

The boatman's passenger, barrel-chested and moustachided, stood and stripped down to his bright red silk trunks. Then, to a burst of cheers he could not hear, he dived over the side and began swimming leisurely towards the inferno.

The time was two minutes past four on the afternoon of July 24, 1883—just 80 years ago. A growy, hetoke adventure had begun.

Captain Matthew Webb had set out to prove, for the second time in his eventful life, that achieving the impossible was merely a matter of power, grim pluck, and never-say-die.

Eight years before, wearing those same red trunks, the gallant captain had dived off the end of the Dover Pier and struck out with purposeful breast-strokes for the coast of France.

That first Channel swim had seemed no less the was stung by jellyfish, carried by tides off his course, all but overwhelmed by cold and sleepiness, "This crust see is killing me," he had gasped as he was fed beef-tea and brandy.

After 12 hours his following crew had been so sure he must give up, they had prepared to

He grew famous. English and French society liented him; public funds were opened on his behalf; he appeared at concerts, and was entertained by the Lord Mayor of London. For a time, demonstrating his swimming and diving skill at exhibitions far and wide. Webb was here of the day.

But then both his bull-like strength and the public memory of his feat began to fade. His capital shrank, and he found it harder and harder to earn a living.

Soon he was almost forgotten.

For such a situation, Matthew Webb knew and your remote. He must perform some new, constituting swimming, as it had been all his life.

He had been, only seven years old, one of a Shropshire family of 12 children, when he first learned to swim. At 10 he had plunged fearleasty into the swirling River Severn to save one of his seven brothers from drawning.

Training to be a millor, he had dived into the Marsey to save a drawning schoolmate's life. Then while serving aboard the Channel steamship. Russia, he had swum through a gale for 30 minutes in a vain attempt to reach a

But — Niagara? This was a very different matter, the knowledgeable warned him. It was the most dangerous swim in the world. He would need not only all his skill, strength and staying power, but a, strong dash of luck as well.

He did not seem to be underrating the dreadful challenge.

In 23 years, he knew well, 80 people had lost their lives in those rapids. A 90-million-ton weight of water swept over the Falls' precipitous edge every hour, tumbling three-quarters of a mile with frightful furue. At the base, it

Webb knew what he must do to survive: dive into the calm interlying pool, float into the rapida, and swim clear of the deadly rocks and whirlpool by use of every desperate ounce of strength he could muster. Not until he was several miles downstream could he hape to land.

To brook clear of the whirlpool, he would swim for several hours on its outer edge. Nego-tiating the rapids, he would dive as often as he

"Now I want to avoid the sides and yet I dare not go into the middle, for there lies the vortex, and that meens death."

So the awed crowds gathered. There was no

A hurricane struck in Victoria's Memorial Arena one recent Saturday and, before it was done, five homes collapsed, three people were hurt, a looter was shot-and a team together less than two months became the first Victoria group to win the B.C. first aid team championship.

The five-man team that won what is known officially as the provincial mine rescue and first aid competition comes from what is known as the Naval Fire Service branch of the department of national desence, stationed at HMC Dock-

It won primarly because its captain, Charles Williamson, test aid instruction chief of the 128 member fire service, decided after defeat in 1962 that "if we were going to win this thing, our whole approach would have to be changed."

our whole approach would have to be changed."

Little things can go wrong in these competitions... patients can be treated in the wrong place, a planner can stand in the wrong spot, a phone call can be forgotten.

And these little things can cost the most points of the required total of 1,500, since the team's speed and its met hods of treatment account for only 30 per cent while its approach to each individual accident or rescue counts for 60 per cent. The rest is carved up among many less vital sections.

As luck would have it, the Naval Fire Service team which met defeat in 1962 was dis-vice team which met defeat in 1962 was dis-banded when regulars Hardy Lane, Cecil White and Jack James went to other sections of the fire-division service.

That left Mr. Williamson and co-captain Al Day still in the Dockyard section and luck had its way again.

Mr. Williamson was instructed by the service to begin a first aid course for men coming up for the required five-year review. He posted a notice telling of his troubles and asking for volunceers and, out of a big class, got exactly but they won.

In the next month, more training—and a pause for another meet in Cumberland, where they came second behind the champions from Ladysmith—before the provincial victory.

"The service gave us almost unlimited time to train," says Mr. Williamson, "and we got immense help from Ken Soles and Howard Nelson, a couple of St. John Ambulance men who work at the Dockyard. They set up accidents for us to tackle."

Duty always came first, of course, but the team now was together in one shift at the Docktyard firehall and managed to get from five to eight hours for practice during every 24 hours on the job.

The Naval Fire Service here works in five firehalls, at Rocky Point, Belmont Park, Patricia Bay airport, Naden barracks and the Dockyard. Each man works 24 hours on and 48 hours off, for a total of 56 hours a week.

THE SIZE OF A SHIFT ranges from five officers and men at the barracks to a dozen at Dockyard. Pay for the men ranges from at Duckyard. Pay for the men ranges from $315 a month for probationers to $350 for first-class firemen, and officers and men enjoy the usual fringe benefits for federal civil servants. At the moment, the chief of the 128-man service is Gordon Ball of the Navy, recently promoted to lieutenant-commander, effective in Sentember

Most was held by WCB, B.C. mines department and Island mine safety association.

He is the former deputy chief and, when a new deputy is chosen, he will be a civil servant. Later chiefs and deputies also will be civilians in line with a new federal policy.

There's fire-fighting equipment aplenty at each of the five sections. Each has a pumper and spares of the stationary and portable varieties. Dockyard also has an arabulance, resuscitator, ladder truck and rescue truck among major equipment, while Belmont Park has a ladder truck and there are big crash trucks and tank trucks at both Rocky Point arsenal and Pat Bay airport.

and Pat Bay airport.

Fires and ambulance calls in any part of the Pacific Command area can come any time and Dockyard firemen are ready to help any outside area when asked.

Alsoays on Call

BUT THOSE AREN'T all of the duties of an average day. All of the firemen, the first aid team included, must be available for standaid team included, must be available for standby duty on every warship and at every gathering of more than 100 people. They must inspect all fire-fighting equipment once a month and every building in the command once a year.

And first aid team members have given demonstrations on mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to hundreds of groups in this area.

Fire protection in Pacific Command was a navy proposition until 1946, when the Navai Fire Service was organized across Canada on roughly its present civilian basis.

First aid has always been a part of service instruction but the team didn't invade outside competitions until Johnny Smith, a St. John Ambulance member, made the suggestion to

Mr. Williamson during an examination of Dockyard workers.

First major victory came in the team's second year of competition, 1958, when it won the Colonist Trophy for the Island men's open championship. That same year, the team represented B.C. in its only national competition to date, coming 12th of 28 groups seeking the Canadian novice title.

Personnel changed almost completely each year and the team ran out of money in 1959 and 1960. There was no team in 1961 due to department commitments.

They were supposed to be returning home from a first aid competition when the storm hit. Light bulbs flashed for lighting, Halloween sparklers meant broken power lines, and the Arena sound system was on full volume with recordings of thunder and wind.

A nearby home collapsed, and a man pinned under a 289-pound beam. Moments later, down went another house, leaving another citizen disabled—with wrists cut and thigh fractured. A policeman chasing a looter shot him and the looter feli on this patient. Then a fireman was burned in touching a wire.

Muhammed Waseem Hunts the Enemy in Our Midst

Muhammed Waseem, Pakistani scientist, plant pathologist, and more specifically, nematologist, now of 1173 Hewlett Place, was born in Lucknow 35 years

Over ten and cookies the other evening he described his home life in India, his growing interest in botuny and related subjects during his schooldays, and the various steps in his professional education and career which have brought him to Victoria, where he and his co-worker, R. P. Messum, are plant protection officers for the department of agriculture, on the third floor of the old Post Office Building.

His father was a civil engineer, and Muhammed was the only boy in a family of four children. Strangely enough, he finds a certain similarity in his life here to that of his child-

"Lucknow is a cultural city," he said. "more so than any city in North India. And, like Victoria, living is more leisurely than in many another place of comparable size."

The facts that he has found Vic torians friendly, and possessed of an appreciation of tradition and historical background, are, he say a, other qualities in common. His family life knew the ceremonial flavour which has always been associated with the East. His favourite sports at home were riding, hunting and swimming, and continue to be so on Vancouver

The acientific pattern of his years was set when he obtained his master of science degree in agriculture, with a major in plant pathology, at Agra University in 1949. This was followed by a term as assistant mycologist to the East Pakistan, government, and a year of postgraduate training at Cambridge, in England, There he says he enlow. graduate training at Camoring.

A short time later, he obtained a Fulbright scholarship to the University of Auburn, Alabama, and here he met and worked with a brilliant actanist, a Professor Caigns, who greatly influenced the course of his studies, and whom course of his studies, and whom he remembers with obvious ad-miration. Two years at McGill's department of plant pathology, as graduate assistant radiante assistant, came next, then period as research officer to the oversment's department of agri-situse at Kentville, Nova Scotia, and after that the appointment to Victoria.

All of which brings us to bis special field, a comparatively new science known as remutalogy. And here a rather scarifying world opens up to such amateur garden ers as may be wordering, help leady, about the mysterious cause of collapse and don't him their plants, shrubs, vegetables, or lawn, It may be a "nematode"!

The name comes from "name," meaning thread. And it is a micro-scapic selworm, a parasite, which can and does result in an appalling amount of damage to plant life and rest crops. In Pakistan, where the main food product is rise, a life-and-death struggle is being fought to eliminate the peat. Whether are not the same extensive thought to eliminate the peat. Whether or not the same extensive work is being done in China, where the rice crop is of course equally important, Muhammed doesn't know. Certainly the United States is on to the invader. In Florida the paramitic disease reached propartions which moved the department of agriculture to issue thousands of warning cards to tourists, apro-pos of the removal of any plant life from one location to another without first cleaning away all soil adhering to the roots. In this soil, explains the illustrated folder, lives the deadly and devastating nematicle, which can thus be spread all over the country from coast to coast. The traveller is begged not to be a "nema-toter."

That such a pest exists at all is gone the rounds, asys Muhammed Wassum, which illustrates the complete ignorance which the plant pathologist occasionally runs into when he endeavours to explain the

"You have nematede trouble," the expert informed a far med whose crops were wasting away.

"What kind?"

"Nematode."

The farmer shook his head, "Never seen 'em," he said, "What kind of toad is that?"

Actually, there are scores of dif-ferent kinds, says Muhammed, and deals with some of them in his published papers on the subject. There are other varieties in endnumbers which have never en isolated or classified. Who they are, it will truly be a nightmare rogues' gallery, because the sketches of certain known types as presented, many thousand times magnified, in a horribly fascinating American government booklet by Dr. N. A. Cobb, are the stuff of science fiction shockers! One is called the "dragon nematode" and is startlingly reminiscent of that mythical creature of medieval mythical creature of medieval fame. Another is a long colling serpent with a spear at the business pent with a spear at the business end like a hypodermic needle, which it uses in just that fashion to suck tender root tissues. I asked Ina Uhthoff, a distinguished artist whose work I admired if I might join her classes. Naturally, she asked me what kind of work I wished to do. I answered of work I wished to do. I answered vaguely that I just wanted to paint. She looked at me dubiously but consented.

At the beginning of each morn-ing, when there was the clatter of easels and boards being set up, through the silence and absorption through the silence and absorption of pupils at work, to the end when paint boxes were packed and put away again, the studio was an enchanted and enchanting place.

Sometimes It Happens MURDER to the Best Intentioned

by MISTAKE!

CECIL CLARK FEATURE

Back in the nineties, as related in last week's Islander, the Christmas Eve shooting of Davie Fee by Larry Whelan at Blanshard and View carried just a hint that Fee might have been mistaken for someone else. Such murders by mistake do occur and one of the earliest is described in a hundred-year-old report of Judge Matthew Begbie wherein he tells of "One, Gilchrist who, in an affray in a drinking saloon at Williams Lake (believed to have been got up with a view of shooting an old adversary of Gilchrist's) shot an inoffensive bystander named Pearce through the brain."

"The whole story," went on the judge, "was, as alleged, one of the ghastly parodies by which in California it is too often attempted to turn the administration of justice into a horrible farce. Gilchrist, having an old grudge against a man named Turner, and having threatened to shoot him on sight, raised a pretended dispute with an Irishman, which soon attained the necessary degree of violence to make it quite natural for Gilchrist to draw his revolver.

said Begbie contemptuously, "of course threw themselves on Gilchrist so as to divert the pistol from the Irishman but, instead of hitting Turner, the bullet lodged in the brain of Pearce. This of course would have been "death by misadventure" in California. In England Gilchrist would probably have been hanged. In British Columbia it is not perhaps an altogether unsatisfactory result that Gilchrist was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to penal servitude for life."

This gold rush answer to the matter of a misdirected bullet had a slight echo 36 years later when, in Cranbrook late one night, an Italian laborer called Pasto and his pal were thrown out of a dive. Considerably banged up in the process of ejection, disconsolately they made their way over to the freight yards and, as they stood talking, they heard footsteps ap-proaching from behind. Imagining their recent proaching from bening, inagining their reverse assailants were preparing a nother assault, Pasto pulled a gun and fired in the darkness. His bullet instantly killed Ed Ryan, who had nothing to do with the affray but was merely taking a shortcut home. For his mistake Pasto drew a death penalty, subsequently commuted to life imprisonment.

Lethbridge Affair

STILL ANOTHER curious but rather hair-raising angle to this misdirected bullet gambit occured in Lethbridge, Alberta, back in 1926.

Seems that 35-year-old Alberta Provincial Police Constable C. J. "Jimmy" Carr and his wife, newly transferred from Calgary, had just settled themselves into a house at 817 6th Street Scuth. So recent was their occupancy that they hadn't yet got a phone, which meant if Carr was wanted in off duty hours someone. if Carr was wanted in off-duty hours, someone from the office had to pick him up.

Lethbridge was a divisional headquarters in the APP set-up, where of course from Carr's personal history sheet one could glean the information that he was born in Rawalpindi, India (his father was in the Royal Engineers), Page 6-The Dully Colonist, Sunday, July 21, 1968 joined the Royal Northwest Mounted Police in 1911, went overseas with Lord Strathcona's Horse in 1915 and after being wounded twice (Somme and Amiens) came back with a Military Medal to join the newly-formed Alberta Provincial Police. From which it can be concluded that, with his 15 years' police and army experience. Const. Jimmy Carr had seen a few experience, Const. Jimmy Carr had seen a few tight spots. His closest shave of all, however, tight spots. His closest shave of all, however, was slated for the early morning hours of February 11, 1926.

It was on this moonlit and snowbound occasion, when the Carrs were asleep upstairs, that at five minutes past three in the morning there came a rat-tat-tat at the front door of No. 817. Jimmy awakened drowsily and, thinking it was someone from the barracks summoning him to special duty, went down in his pyjamas to answer the door pyjamas to answer the door.

Passing through the 16-foot-long downstairs hallway he snapped on the light, then opened the door. Instantly a roughly-clad stranger, one hand in his breast pocket, pushed forward with an air of belligerent authority, forcing Carr rapidly backwards. Now Jimmy wasn't cuite the type to be pushed account least of quite the type to be pushed around, least of all in his own house, but to his surprise when he started to remonstrate the stranger whip-ped out a gun. This seemed a little too much, and Carr immediately selzed the intruder's wrists in a hearty grip and for the next few seconds the pair lurched to and fro, Carr's main idea, as he said afterwards, being to see that the muzzle of the gun didn't point his way.

It was during this brief stand-up test of strength that suddenly a shot rang out and Carr felt his assailant relax, then gradually sink to the floor. His first thought was that the stranger had been wounded by the discharge of his own gun, but when he grabbed up the fallen weapon he not only realized that the barrel was cold but also, to his astonishment, the man on the floor looked as if he had been scalped!

No doubt about it, whatever had hit him, had blown the top of his head off! Which meant only one thing: the shot that hit him must have come through the open door!

Came the quick idea that another slug might follow, so Carr instantly dropped to a crouch, reached out and snapped off the hall light, ther with a sort of follow-through motion kicked the front door shut.

If Jimmy Carr had been drowsy when he came downstairs he was wide awake now, for he found himself standing in a pitch-black hall-way, a gun in his hand, a dead or dying man at his feet (uttering the strangest gurgles and snores) and an unknown gunman outside his front door.

He called upstairs to let his wife know he was alright, then with the thought that the shooting shouldn't be one-sided, slipped through to the dark living room and took a look through the parted front window curtains. Up and down the street there wasn't a sign of life, but then of course the unknown marksman could be hiding. Thing now was to phone the city police, but having no phone it meant a trip to one of the neighbors, with whom so far he hadn't become acquainted.

Picking his way around the corpse in the hall he dashed upstairs, pulled trousers over his pyjamas, donned a coat, then slipping out the back door cut across the garden. As he sped H

He'd left his service gun at the barracks, but he still carried the dead man's gun, which in turn reminded him that the sight of it might give the wrong impression to some sleepy householder, particularly at three in the morning. So as he banged at a likely-looking back door he held the gun behind his back.

A small and somewhat timid man answered the knock, and with Carr's terse "There's been a man shot in my house! Can I use your phone?" unconsciously he let the gun come into view. It was the one cue for the openmouthed householder to vanish! Carr found the phone without assistance and made his call.

Police Informed

AS IT HAPPENED, someone else had best-en him to the alarm. Mrs. Rhoda Tuckell at 813 Sixth had been awakened just ten minutes No. 817. She told them it was next door, but no sooner was she back in bed than a shot rang out. So she phoned the police,

The sound of the gunshot echoing through the quiet neighborhood also attracted the attention of City Constable Lowe at his home a block away. He, too, phoned the deak sergeant be-fore heading up the street in the direction of the shot, Carr meantime had returned to his house, given a word of assurance to his wife, then sat on a lower step of the hall stairs facing the front door and awaiting the police.

It seemed to him that, strange and puzzling as the whole affair had been, it might be in keeping for the killer to try an encore.

In keeping for the killer to try an encore.

For this reason he had the gun ready just in case. However, if the sight of it had scared the daylights out of one householder, it had the opposite effect when a minute later a city policeman walked in the front door, flashlight in hand. The beam first took in the gruesome spectacle on the floor, then shifted to Carr on the stairs.

"Hey, hold it' It's me, Carr!" yelled the Provincial Policeman, for through the blinding light he had just alimpsed the officer's free light he had just glimpsed the officer's free hand slip regressed to his hip!

More police arrived, and from then on there was intense activity by both City and Provincial Police trying to round up the killer. Extra men were pressed into service, road blocks set up, freight cars searched and, as phones jangled andlessly in police headquarters, the unknown endlessly in police headquarters, the unknown corpus at 817 Sixth Street was borne to the morgue. The Carrs spent the night with another police family, and next day managed to find an apartment. Mrs. Carr had had enough of Sixth Street of Sixth Street.

It was daylight, after a night of coaseless searching, that the gunman was found, where he had taken refuge in an abandoned mine shaft in the nearby Galt Valley. He turned out to be 23-year-old Karl Perdue, and the dead man was identified as 21-year-old Walter Vere, a close friend of Perdue's. Which from a police of the production of oint of view seemed to require some elabor

Woman in the Case

PERIOUE SAID that Vere had a girl friend whom he auddenly discovered had been rather intimate with a man living at 817 Sixth Street. This challenge to his honor requiring satisfac-tion, and thinking the man was still at the address, he and his pal Perdue decided to knock off the interfering Casanova. Perdue carried a 303 rifle, and Vere had his revolver,

As the somewhat shaken Perdue explained it, when he glimpsed through the open door the two men struggling in the hall, and Vere apparently getting nowhere with his hand gun, he decided like a loyal and true friend to help matters out by shooting Vere's pyjama-clad adversary. Unfortunately, as in the case of Mr. Gilchrist at Williams Lake in 1863, the bullet found a billet in the wrong head! For which little peccadillo, typed as manslaughter by a jury. Perdue drew ten years.

Anyway, it was a close call for Const. James Carr, whom you'll be glad to know is still going strong. I was speaking to him and his wife the other afternoon at their flat at 1706 Lillian Road. Looking younger than his 72 years, he told me he stayed in the Alberta Provincial Police until it was absorbed into the RCMP. Which, you'll remember, is where he carne in. Which, you'll remember, is where he came in.
When he finally left the Mounties his police and military service totalled 26 years.
When I met him he'd just come back from Calgary where he'd been visiting daughter Patricia and the grandchildren, and hefore that he and Mrs. Carr drove down to Mexico with their trailer.

Jimmy is what you would call "a character," with not only a hint of "London Pride" in his speech but the sense of humor that goes with it. He filled me in on parts of this story in just that yein.

One other person here in Victoria also knows the story at first hand, for he prompted me to write it. He's ex-RCMP Inspector E. W. Bavin of 3355 Richmond Road.

"Ernie," whom I've known for 30 years, hap-pened to be the APP inspector in charge at Lethbridge who also sped to the Sixth Street scene the night when Messrs. Perdue and Vere lost their heads!

President's Burden

"Every president finds certain inevitable forces at work against him when he enters 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. No matter what he promised . . . the stark reality of pulitical life greets him the minute he cross threshold of the White House after the Inaugural Parade. He is never the same man again.

The man who wrote these words ought to know. He is E. Frederic Morrow, who served as one of President Eisenhower's aides in the White House from 1956 to 1960. Morrow is a Negro, and much as he admires Eisenhower, the president's "lukewarm stand" on divitrights made him "heartsick."

A cultivated, articulate Negro, Morrow gave up a responsible post with one of the big talevision networks to join the Eisenhower to Yet he had a difficult time merely organizing an office staff for himself in the White House. White secretaries were reluctant to serve under a Negro boss. The ice was broken by a shy, frightened girl from Massachusetts, who came to his office in tears, saying she wished to volunteer out of a some of "Christian duty."

This is one of the few moving moments in the book. Morrow kept a diary, and his book consists of that diary. I would hazard the guess that the text had been polished and probably toned down.

Morrow advised Eisenhower on matters af-fecting Negroes. He made the mistake of taking his duties too seriously, and found that a chili usually descended when he brought up the matter of civil rights.

Morrow's reaction was of regret rather than of anger. It is as though he reconciled himself to a half-s-lonf-is-better-than-none situation. "I feel ridiculous," he confesses under the date Oct. 20, 1957, "standing on platforms all over the country trying to defend the Administration's record on civil rights."

All They Need is the Opportunity

I could hardly believe it . . . that Nancy, age six, could make an apple pie all by herself. Well, almost all by herself. Her mother did melt the shortening and pour the boiling water into the cup. But Nancy, who has to stand on a stool to reach the counter, mixed the pie crust, rolled it out, fitted it into the pan, put in the filling, then put the top crust on and crimped it nicely around the edge.

Nancy put canned apple filling in her pie with a little cinnamon and about a tablespoon of melted butter poured over before the top crust was put on. The edges of this hot water pastry will seal around the edge by merely pressing together, they do not need to be dampened. This is a splendid pastry for a child to work with because if it tears while being pressed into the pie plate the tears are easily mended by just pressing the edges together. Better let mother supervise the baking.

PINOCCHIO PIZZA 2½ cups biscuit mix, ½ cup milk (about), 2 thup, noft butter, 2 thup, Parmesan choese, I small onion, I tap, oregano, thup, catsup, I tin tomato nauce (7½ ot.), 6 wieners sliced or 6 slices Polish anuage diced, ¾ cup shredded Cheddar

Butter a 12-inch pizza pan or use a baking sheet. Measure the biscuit mix and stir in enough milk to make a soft dough. Sprinkle flour on table and put dough in centre. Roll the dough around in the flour until nicely covered. Roll or pat into a 12-inch circle. Place the dough in the pizza pan and press the edges up to make a rim. If you use a flat baking sheet simply press the edge up into a rim. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with the Parmesan cheese. Peel the onion and chop fine. Mix the onion, oregano, catsup and the tomato sauce and spread over the dough. Arrange the Wieners on top and sprinkle with the shredded cheese. Bake it in a pre-heated 425° oven for about 20 minutes, Cut in wedges and serve hot. Have a large bowl of raw finger vegetables, some pickles and olives and there you are. With a sliced watermelon, a good fruit punch (see last week's Thought for Food) or carbonated beverages and you have the makings of a party.

PLENTY OF CONTOURS

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's how I used some of my full-sized flat sheets to make contour sheets for r new twin beds.

I bought a new contour sheet to fit the mattress of the bed I wanted. Then I ripped the stitches at all four corners, and used it for a pattern. As a test, I cut ut one sheet from the pattern and completed it be-

When all my "new" contour sheets were cut, fin-ished and ready for use, I sewed the first sheet back as it was originally. I had and the pattern cost me

GIRL with a TWIRL

There is a certain element of risk about interviewing Miss Beverly Peters.

I remember once reading a book on journalism which described in the most vivid terms the various scenes and circumstances which any journalist might be called upon to encounter. It all added up to a mighty catalogue of death and destruction, fire and flood, murder and mayhem. In the face of any or all of these, the successful reporter always kept his head. He viewed the worst calamity with poise, detachment and equanimity; the world had yet to produce the cataclysm which would in any way ruffle him. Nothing could persuade him to do anything else but what a certain Duke of Gloucester once described as "scribble, scribble,"

Interviews have been carried on and stories written under conditions of great danger or difficulty but these have generally been foreseen. I have been able to avoid all such perilous undertakings up until a while ago when I ran headling into one which was quite unheralded and, indeed, quite novel.

I went to have an instructive little chat with 16 year-old Beverly Peters of 3004 Colquitz Avenue, in the fair reaches of Saanich, I came out unscathed it is true but it could, perhaps, out unscathed it is true but it could, perhaps, have been otherwise.

It is not that Beverly packs a gun and, like the lady in the song, doesn't know it is loaded. Nor, to the best of my knowledge, is she a judo expert thirsting for practice.

She is a twiris.

She twiris and twiris.

She had her button with her during our interview and, brother, she kept it moving. Drives, snaps, olimbing monkeys, whirlamacues, butterflies, pretuch and gram cutters followed one another in rapid and fascinating succession.

Of course, these manoeuvres may have been shuttles, whips, side-winders, Kansas City thrusts or even Hampel's durgles. I wouldn't know about anything as technical as that but I was assailed with the thought that the whole performance seemed to be safer viewed at a distance.

Of course, a little reflection would indicate that my lears of being suddenly bopped were actually quite unnecessary. Beverly has been twirling for eight or nine years and, she adds: "for five years seriously." In addition to this she has won prizes and trophi es, including two at the Pacific Northwest Exhibition. She trained with Victoria's Miss Claudia Spouse and in Seattle, with American champion, Mary and. In Scattle, with American champion, Mary Lou Ingram. And her appearances at all man-ner of festivities in and around these parts have been numerous. Just recently she provided a floor show at the Carlton Club, twirled with the Mount View High School band at Banif and appeared with Reg Wood's orchestra at the Butchart Cardons

All this points unerringly to the supposition that she knows what she is doing, has everything—and particularly that baton!—completely under control and is most unlikely to injure the spectators no matter how restricted the space in which she has to operate.

Miss Peters, a true native of Victoria. is also a French horn player, a dancer and, scolastically, a winner. She has taken the award for the top student in her schools at grades seven eight and, this year, ten. Also this year at Mount View High School she took the prize for the best student in grades 10 and 11.

She has been a dancing student for four years at the Vivian Briggs studios. Here she includes in tap, ballet and modern jazz, expressing a preference for the first.

It looks rather as if she took everying up at once seeing that she also started on the French horn four years ago. Here she has studied to excellent effect with members of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra. Beverly was "borrowed" by the Victoria University band for its opening performance.

She has her eye on a university career when she (inishes high school. The emphasis will be on music. English and French.
"History I like, too," she says. But she is not particularly enamoured of mathematics or the sciences.

the sciences.

Oh well! The people are few who like everything and so, for that matter, are those with as varied and proven talents as Beverly he tried once more to persuade him to abandon his foolbardy adventure. How much did the gal-lant captain have left, he asked, of the money he made by swimming the Channel? About $15.000, Webb repiled,

"Then let me row you back ashore." the fleryman wrged. "At least apend the rest of your money before you try your swirn."

Webb smiled. But of course there was no question of giving up.

At first, after his plunge into the river opposite the Maid of the Mist landing, all went well. Faster and faster he moved, as he was drawn inexorably towards the rapids. His pow-erful strokes could be seen easily in the clear water.

One moment he was high atop a great wave; then lost in a foaming trough. Tossed along like a cork, he covered a mile and a quarter in five minutes. Once he disappeared completely for 150 yards.

A quarter of a mile down, where the river bends, Webb met the whirlpool. Now was the crucial moment. Would his plan work?

crucial moment. Would his plan work?

It seemed at first as if it would. As he reached the perimeter of the whirlpool's force a great wave snatched him; but soon his bobbing head was seen again.

But then, with a great cry. Captain Matthew Wobb threw up his hands and shot down into a watery chasm. Tensely, the spectors waited for him to reappear.

But he was never seen alive again.

It was five days before they found his body; at Lewiston, seven miles below the rapids.

Curlously, the doctors decided he had not been drowned. The huge weight of water had paralyzed his nerve centres, making it impossible for him to breathe or use his limbs.

The world could find no moral.

Hegemony Vanishes

By JOHN BARKHAM

In 1948, shortly before he died, that wise old man, General Jan Christian Smuts, told me that the most epoch-making event he had witnessed in his long life had been the end of white supremacy in Asia-because he said, it would inevitably lead to the end of white supremacy around the world.

NEW BOOKS and AUTHORS

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN

How right he has proved to be! The day of white hegemony in Asia is ended, in Africa it is its final stages, and now the struggle has shiften to the United States, where the Negro is fighting not to separate himself from white race but to integrate

This book by a research student is the fruit of a three-year study into the impact of this historical shift on Negro Americans, It is based on interviews with some 80 Negro American leaders and intellectuals. From all of this material Isaacs has pieced together one of the most enlightening cross-sections of Negro experience and opinion published in years.

What immediately strikes the reader is its tone of urgency and militancy. Gone forever are previously accepted procrassinative devices such as "tokenism" and "gradualism." The new mood is one of desperation and demand. THE NEW WORLD OF NEGRO AMERICANS, by Harold R. Innaca, New York: The John Day Co. 366 pp. 87.50, have to lose anyway?"

This new mood is no isolated phenomenon. It is a reflection of the world-wide assault on white the world-wide assault on white supremscy now in progress. In the U.S. the fight is being waged against white supremacy wherever it still exists, North as well as South. "For our democratic system to prevail," the author declares, "it must finally, become, oddly enough, democratic."

No one can fail to be impressed with the depth and the dimension of this new spirit, which appears to have flared up spontaneously smong Negroes in every part of the country. It marks, in Isaacs' words, "a massive shift in their conceptions of their place in the conceptions of their place in the world and in this society, in their view of who and what they are." The book is especially illuminating in its demonstration of the effect on Negro Americans of the emancipation of non-white races broad. Isaacs shows how the traditional reluctance of the Negro American to be identified with Africa has given place to a lively

Some Negroes have actually left the U.S. to live in Africa, but, judging by the interviews in the book, the experience has not been a happy one. If the back-to-Africa trek has proved anything at all, it is that the Negro is not an African but an American. For all Americans the time immediately ahead/is bound to be a difficult transition period in which as a people they will be which as a people they will be required to meet the test of a practical as against a theoretical democracy. How will it all end? A Negro American expressed his hopes thus to the author: "In 25 years, if all goes for the best, Negroes will stand in American society about where the Jews

Once Such Strong Points

BASTION'S REPLICA

Driving along the old Island Highway, just east of View Royal, I suddenly had spots before my eyes, caused by what appeared to me to be the bastion of Fort Victoria.

It could not be, of course-and yet there it was, on a slight rise, weather-beaten and forbidding-looking. I knew that the old fort and its bustions had been torn away long before the turn of the century. Therefore I was confused.

And so I drove into the grounds of the Canadian Crest Motel and ere, sure enough, was the bastion. I met Dr. Herbert P. Plasterer, here 16 years from Germany, where he was an architect, and, he explained to me, building the bastion of Fort Victoria is his hobby.

He showed me a pile of stout timbers and told me they had come from Cloverdale House, the Dr. William Fraser Tolmie home, torn down a few weeks ago.

In time, Dr. Plusterer said, he hopes to have a store and a residence built, and some palisades - in other words, a miniature Fort

I must any the bastion is beautifully done, as strong, I'm sure, as the original hastion that guarded Fort Victoria. It is built on solid rock, and a grim jail has been fashioned-so grim, indeed, that I developed the shivers as I peered into its rocky blackness

Impressed by all I saw, and delighted to see Fort Victoria's bastion standing again, even though it is a copy, I hurried to the Provincial Archives to look up the fort of old, which James Douglas built in 1843, and which was the start of the city Victoria as we know it today.

James Robert Anderson, who, as a boy, went to Rev. Robert Staines' school in the fast, wrote his manuairs when he was an old man, and he recalled: "The bastions were pierced in the upper part for cannon and with apastures for rifle.

pierced in the upper part for cannon and with appatures for riffe.

"The flagstaff stood on the western front and the bettry about the centre of the fort.

"There was a watchman attached to the fort, a Kanaka, whose duties were to lock and unlast the gates, to ring the bell for rising, for monin and for divine service on Sundays. He paraded the fort during the night and at stated intervals would call out, 'All's well.'

"Divine service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Staines in the Moss Hall and was attended by all the attaches at the fort and school."

Dr. J. S. Helmcian, when he first came, here in 1850, lived in the fort. It was there he mot Cocelia, the eldest daughter of Governor James Douglas. It was in the fort they lived when they were first married.

Bachelors' Hall in the fort, was a merry place, filled with young men and, wrote Dr. Helmcken, "there was always singing going on, particularly on Saturday nights, much to the annoyance of the parson, Staines, and his wife, but not so to the girl boarders.

"Bachelors' Hall was the rendezvous of all visitors—if they were socially acceptable, so mimetimes there was a good number, including Capt. Grunt . . , the captains and mates of RMI ships when in harbor and HM officers and middless.

"Or course, semetimes they were a little but the season and middless.

"Of course, sometimes they were a little sisterans, but never much m, because the assen was on one side and Mr. Douglas only Sub-force away.

By 1860 Victoria, but two years away from-incorporation, was feeling growing pains. The old fort was in the way. There were cries that it should go, though the old-time Hudson's Bay Company officers did not like the change. By midsummer of 1861 there was more progress, or destruction, as the old-timers said, and one of them, far-sighted, did his best to preserve a feature of the fort: "ELMOVAL OF THE BURSON'S BAY COMPANY' FLAGSTAFF.—This old landmark is in process of removal . . . preparatory to being planted at the residence of Henry Rhodes, Hawaiian consulting this port."

When the flagstaff went, there was, said The Colombst, "considerable grumbling... on the part of several of the company's oldest attaches, who declare that by its removal they will not only be deprived of telling which way the wind blows, but they have not now a stick left from which to hang a bit of bunting on gala days."

Too bad, sniffed The Colombst: "Poor fellows—we pity them. One by one the old landmarks are disappearing and there will soon be anught left to remind them of the good old times when Sunday fell on Saturday afternoons and each blanket was good for an otter stin."

By 1864 the fort had completely gone: "BBE OLD FORT—Bit by bit all traces of the Hudson's Bay fort are being obliterated. NEW ARMY MUSTERS

At 10:30 a.m. June 29, a group of interesting people gathered near Montreal to make an important decision that may at some future date affect us all. When they finished a Victoria man who lives quietly and studiously on Dallas Road had been singularly honored.

Professor C. S. Burchill, teacher of history and economics at Royal Roads, is now the newly-elected national president of the World Federalists of Canada, a non-partisan, non-sectarian, non-profit organization of citizens working for peace through the establishment of enforcible world law.

It may surprise a great many who read this as a news item in the daily paper. It may cause many to ask what are these World Federalists. And some might shrug it off as just another organization out on Cloud Nine.

Most of us tend to move in small circles of our choosing, flight patterns in the circuit of life with take-off, a climbing turn to cruising altitude and a final approach on the glide-path of fate to journey's end.

So it is always a thrill when on occasion we find a chance to wobble out of orbit and make contact with other formations of thought, comion, philosophy.

opinion, philosophy.

For some years the Burchills of Victoria have provided for a growing circle of friends an opportunity to reach out for new ideas, to stretch their minds in exercises of thought. Several time a month new and old friends are welcome to their home for a discussion group that mines ideas, good talk, wit and companionship in equal parts. Their object is to neck along practical lines an answer to the ills of teday's compilicated world.

The June 28 announcement from Montreal recognizes that Charles Burchill, a student of international affairs, together with Mrs. Burchill, are the local heystones to this growing movement of sanity and reason.

Definition

The word Federalist may farrow the brow, casting a shadow from the Civil War of 1862. But the World Federalists, out of San Francisco by way of Geneva, threaten to outgrow any stigms of prejudice to a word. Besides, the word "federal," in my dictionary, means "the polity in which several states form a unity but remain independent in internal affairs." Not a had phrase to start with. Not a had phream to start with. And the World Federalists of Canada, together with similar organizations in 45 other countries, are thinking their way to peace through world law.

Victoria today has a growing, active group which is a tribute to the sanity of the community. Regular attendance at the lively meetings includes the brains and goodwill of science, politics, philosophy, church and labor.

colence, politics, philosophy, church and labor.

Lord Keynes once said, "It is ideas, not vested interests, which are dangerous for good or evil." And it anyone is wary of man trying to think his way to the future, as he has done strough generations in spite of fear and suspicion, then bewere of the Federalists. For they are dangerously sane and practical. How this is a start?

The San Francisco Conference of 1945, suppt on a wave of optimism over beaches littered by the tide of war, deposited, to the credit of the world, the United Nations. And if the enthusiusm and idealism generated had been backed by more give and take, the world today would be a healthing place in which to meet the deeper problems of population and food. But something turned sour the milk of humanity. Top advance at San Francisco which included civil servants, international lawyers and statement, felt at the slack of smotional tide a growing suspicion of let-down. Some were obviously convinced they had been oftented. National interests had taken precedence over the welfare of man in a rapidly shrinking world. Nuclear Spur

They gathered at Geneva in 1946, coming from some 40 countries apurred by the grim fact of the nuclear age. No governments were afficially committed but the foreign minister of one country turned up as an ordinary citizen. Acting as private individuals they tried to find a formula that would retrieve the good intent of San Francisco. And out of this came a working plan for world peace through world law. new surge of hope to form organizations ready to back the concept of the World Federalists.

In 1947 the idea gained ground rather slowly in Canada. For ten years it was a sickly plant of an idea lying in unfriendly soil. At some point the chemistry of the earth changed and its roots began to spread. In 1961, from each political camp in the House of Commons, a parliamentary branch was formed in which Saanich MP George Chatterton became an early member, and branches leap-frogged across the land.

Meanwhile 'back at the ranch' Mrs. C. S. Burchill of Victoria was getting up a head of impatient steam over the uncontrolled acceleration of the armaments race. For those who watched from the sidelines, the horror of little boys reaching for larger sticks and no one blowing the whistle to stop the game, was almost unboarable. The United Nations, busy stamping out brush fires around the world, had a large body but no muscle. The military talked in nightmare terms of "overkill" that numbed the brain. Signs pointed down a suicidal one-way street to nuclear war. The tranquillizers

First Move

One day in 1869 Mrs. Burchill read a work written by Dr. Brock Chisholm called "Prescription for Survival." It helped her decide that if no one else in Victoria was going to make the first move, she would. Dr. Chisholm, a citizen of international stature, is known for his ability to unsettle the good citizens from the cushions of conformity. The dust cover of the book mentioned that its author was a member of the World Federalists.

Mrs. Burchill, grasping at a straw, telephoned to ask Dr. Chisholm for the address of this organization. They sont literature which the Burchills studied. Result: Professor and Mrs. Burchill became the first members in this area. The germ of an idea had taken root on this failow land,

While the air high over the world was being fouled with nuclear garbage, the Burchills talked to their friends about this idea of peace through world law; they buttonholed anyone who would listen and gradually a cross-section of the community became interested.

A year later, in the fall of 1960, the first public meeting was hold at a hall on Forst Street. Eighty people turned up and a branch was formed with 40 members. Once a mouth they gathered at Oak Bay where discussion held them together, plus some well-written papers. An early member was Darshan Johal who has recently left the capital area planning board to take a United Nations assignment in Ghana. J. C. Cox, local businessman, became the first chairman of the group. There were trade unionists and provincial civil servents and a mathematical physicist together with preachers, teachers and others attracted.

Spreading Interest

By study they began to master the subject and as they realized the importance of the movement they gathered members from as far away as Courtenay. Soon the branch became the most active one outside Ottawa; its membership tripled in two years. Lively minds joined the original group from the engineering profession, librarians, welfare workers; and keen young busnessmen found the discussions atimulating, taking their hopes in the right direction.

The Burchills came up with an idea to save money—which they preferred the group to spend on its magazines (four issues a year) and five news-letters set out by the national office. They doubled the size of their living room, filled it with functional furniture so the Victoria branch became independent of hali rentals. One couple ascertained the cost of building a fallout shelter and donated the money, $500, to Canadian Peace Research as a practical gesture. The Federalists had sponsored Peace Research together with the Society of Friends, and other groups.

In an endeavor to find out for themselves conditions in other countries, the Burchills travelled through Sweden, Israel, the U.S.S.R.,

Yugoslavia and Czecho-Slovakia comparing forms of government and trying to find out what the average citizen was thinking. Next August they leave for Tokyo and the bi-annual meeting of the World Association of World Federalists where they will form part of the Consider delegation. Canadian delegation.

Practical Answers

Picked at random in the Victoria group, one may get quick answers from hard-headed men who are interested from the practical side in this plan for survival.

Dr. L. Austin Wright of Sidney, for 20 years general secretary of the Engineering Institute of Canada, says bluntly:

of Canada, says bluntly:

"Are you in favor of peace? Of course you are. Then what are you doing about it? The World Federalists have a clear-cut plan. There is first-class thinking behind it."

A clear-cut plan! It has never really been tried before simply because man has never had to face a world shrunk to the size of a village with no space left for nationalism. Industrialist Bleyney Scott can peac other points just as quickly when approached:

"Do you believe in police protection for

"Do you believe in police protection for your community?" he asks. "Do you think that haw infractions and arbitrations must be judged in a court of law? Of course you do. This is what we have all done as a practical measure to ensure peace and justice within our community. Is it then impractical to strive for the same system to eliminate was and infor the same system to eliminate war and in-justice between nations? The World Federal-ists have a practical and realistic programme to bring this about . . . and that is what holds my interest in the movement. It makes so much sense . . ."

One also notices that when this group gathers to discuss problems and plans that might fit the concept of world law, they do not allow themselves the luxury of skating around the most difficult problems, but most them land on.

"How do you explain world law," asks one, "to a native in New Guinea who would bash your head with a club and proceed to eat your brains?"

Fifth Loyalty

"I'm from Oak Bay," says a member, "and I'm opposed to any talk of amalgamation with Victoria or any suggestion that we can't look after our own garbage collection and fire protection. But I'm just as good a citizen of British Columbia as any man is Victoria. And I think, I am just as good a Canadian as any from Toronto or Halifax, I have never given up my British passport. If I can have four loyalties to four different governments, and a lively appreciation of what each of these governments does for its citizens, I won't have any trouble adding a fifth loyalty to any werld government that can end the threat of that and step the criminal waste of money in jhe arms race."

A recent meeting in Victoria devoted an evening to discussion of the United Nations' report concerning the effect of disarmament on the economy of countries. Summarizing the weighty volume and taking opposition points

right answers, were Ian Arrol and Dr. Harvey Richardson.

"It is garbage in space that I don't like," said Dr. Richardson later. And who could speak about this subject with more authority than this astronomer from the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory. "For example," he continued, "hundreds of millions of needles were recently launched by the United States for military reasons in defiance of apposition by astronomers from all countries expressed in a resolution of the International Astronomical Union. The nuclear bomb exploded in space over Johnson Island has altered the Earth's radiation belts and made apace travel more dangerous and made it impossible to study the certh's space environment in its natural state. Eventually, terrible space weapons will threaten us. The rule of international law as advocated by the W.F.C. is desperately needed to ensure the preservation of our planet from contamination or setual destruction."

Those who are joining the local branch is increasing numbers are proud that Professor Burchill has been elected to head this national organization that holds meaning and hope for all.

KICKING THE HABIT

Painless Process

By PETER RESULT

Of all the aids to cutting out the eigerette habit I've seen, the best is a book called The Palnieus Way to Stop Smoking, by Jack G.

Mr. Heine suggests self-hyp-mosts—an idea which isn't as far out as it might seem. New York psychiatrist Hyman Chartock says in the preface that the techniques outlined in the book are "safe and sound."

"By showing you beneficial ways to use some of these techniques, the author is going to do more for you than enable you to stop smoking." Dr. Chartock says. "He is going to help you learn how to relax.

The relaxation he will help you achieve isn't a fleeting frag-mentary respite from pressures; it is a revivifying process. You apring back from it feeling re-newed; from it you must gain greater health and happiness."

At the bottom of all the murobo jumbo about smoking, the author points out, is the fact that smoking is a habit you had to work to get in the first place. (Remember your first eigarette, and how sick it made you feel? But you persevered, didn't you?)

And it is a harmful habit.

Besides lung cancer, Mr. Heise lists bronchitis, premature births, increased mortality from peptic ulcers; cancer of the mouth, larynx and enophagus, eye troubles and lessened sexual ability as attributable to smoking.
Now then; what to do about it?
Replace it with something size—huge meals. Replace it with the habit of taking three deep breaths, any Mr. Heles.

Another problem is that three deep breaths might well be relax-ing and healthful, but they don't ing and healthful, but they don't replace the craving.

And that's where the hypnosis current in. You train your subconscious to accept the fact that smoking in harmful, that you don't need it, that you are going to replace it with the healt of taking three deep breaths every time you feel like a cigarette.

You tell yourself all this, and you do it when you're relaxed—no trance or complianted ritual is necessary, he says. After all, don't the eigenette advertising boys get to your subsconscious when you're just sprawled out watching TV?

They most assuredly do, and

They most assuredly do, and can't see any reason why Mr. Jesse's book wouldn't work.

STAMP PACKET

It is remoured that Tonga is go-going to mark the anniversary of the first issuing of gold coins in that territory with something un-usual in the way of commemor-atives. At the time of writing, de-tails are not available but it is said the stamps will be round, probably carrying the design of the coins, and will be 40 to 50 times heavier than ordinary pessage stamps due to the use of some metallic sub-stance. The popularity of these novel stamps is assured, and it is hoped an adequate number will be printed. It is remoured that Tonga is go-

"Strenp Collecting" (UK) reports that a set of 18 definitive stamps for Malta will be I sued by the end of the year. The designs by Envin Cremona will feature periods of Maltese history, and denominations are expected to range from ½ d to £1.

A new definitive series is also being planned for the New Hebrides and will be issued by the Condominium in several stages. The first four, which will probably be released late this year, will be a 15c value showing a New Hebrides industry, 30c and 50c values showing fish or marine life and 12fr featuring hirds.

On June 27, the Mationalist Chin-ne government on Formosa issued a set of stamps known as "Chinese Refugees Fleeing Mainland for Freedom." The 0.80 denomination shows a refugee girl, Li Ying, in tears as she is turned back after reaching Hong Kong, The 3.25 stamp depicts a crowd of starving people in the mass exodus.

. . . In an effort to arouse the interest of professional artists in stamp designing, the postal authorities of several countries are sponsoring contests offering substantial awards, and the idea is a good one. Nearly 1,000 designs were submitted by 800 artists for the 5c Getty abuse commencentive insued by tysburg commemorative issued by the United States on July 1.

For many years Canada was a noted producer of beautiful stamps, then by degrees, the high standard was lowered until several insues were universally ridiculed, and they deserved it! Fortunately there have been exceptions to offset these monstrosities, such as the new definitives, but why produce mything as uninteresting as our current 25c stamp which is Canadian in name only, when every province is teeming with subjects lypically Canadian? There are people who deserve to be honoured. ple who deserve to be honoured, wild life and botanical subjects and old and new landmarks in abundance. Designs from these subjects could be used through the years to promote Canadianism at home and abroad.

The plea for better stamps which appeared in a letter written to The Colonist recently by A. P. Rainey expressed the hopes and desires not only of philatelists, but 9f Canadians in general.

B.C. Has Had Its Racial Problems

RIOT in the NIGHT

That was a dark night in the fall of 1907. It was a wild night in Vancouver, too. Riotous crowds bearing banners demanding a "white Canada" surged through the streets. In front of the City Hall they burned the lieutenant-governor in effigy. There followed a crash of glass in Chinatown that sounded as if an earthquake had struck.

Mounted police—in those days they were mounted-rode here and there trying to keep the crowds in order, but they were about as effectual as King Canute rebuicing the tide.

Then adding to the noise and conon, fire trucks, to the pounding of galloping horses, went howling through ne streets, whether called out to a real fire or simply to soure the crowd I never Anyhow, the divided mob came together again after them like water at the stern of a ship.

Just how did I get into all this? Simply enough. I had been assigned by the morning News-Advertiser to report a meeting to be held in the City Hall for the sole purpose of demanding the future exclusion of all Asiatics from B.C. I arrived just in time to see the growd in the street surrounding a gunny sack stuffed with hay or straw on which the name DUNSMUIR was acrawled in large letters, going up in protesting smoles to heaven. All because at the close of the last legislative cention Lieutenant-Governor Dunsmuir had refused ament to a bill fathered by Attorney-General W. J. Bowser for the almost total exclusion of Orientals. I have no doubt that the Lieutenant-Governor had acted on logal advice mince it appeared like an infringement of federal jurisdiction. But no doubt Mr. Dunsmuir was regarded as a representative of the capital-int class, and so the fury of the crowd fell upon his head.

I have no doubt, either, that the entire demonstration was planned and carried out by the Anti-Asiatic League of that time, the Anti-Asiatic League of that time.

I suppose, as a good reporter, after the burning of the effigy, I should have followed the mob. Still the City Hall was the focus from which the trouble radiated and I felt it my duty to carry out my assignment. In reality the meeting had been used by the mob benders as the signal for gathering the discontented at that point.

It was not until I had emerged from the hot air of the meeting that I was told that rioters, after burning the effigy, had moved into Chinatown, and with stones and brickbats or any missile they could find had smashed every store window in the quarter, driving the terrified swners to seek refuge in upstairs or back rooms. The rioters had evidently been saying in their hearts like the gambiers in Bret Hart's poem:

"We are ruined by Chinese cheap last And they went for the heathen Chine

And they went for the heathen Chinee,"

But a segment of the crowd still unsatisted struck off to attack the Japanese settlement on Powell Street, not far away. Here they did not find their assault so easy. A number of the doughtly inhabitants selsed a long plank that crossed the street and charged into the mob. They would probably have been overwhelmed by numbers, but at this point a reinforcement arrived in the person of a sergeant of the city police force. He drew a revolver and ordered the invaders to stop.

I knew Sergeant Craig and feel sure that I knew Sergeant Craig and feet sure that he would not have shot to harm anybody, but his bluff worked.

The crowd backed down reluctantly,

It must have been about at this juncture that I was drawn into the fracas individually that I was drawn into the fracas individually that I-was drawn into the fracas individually and surprisingly. In turning a street corner I ran into a human widout in the form of a hatless little Japanese whose hair seemed to stand on end like black bristles, while his usually yellow face was suffused with a convulsive red. Grabbing my coat with one hand with the other he pointed a long and murderous-looking knife right at my stomach.

"You go mak trouble?" he domanded,

I think I was too much surprised to be ared, so I told him soothingly "No," I was at a newspaper reporter going my rounds, "All right. You not mak trouble," and he let me go.

But I did make trouble for him. When I got to the police station and told my story I was assigned to guide two burly cops to the corner where the militant sentinel was still standing. Each policeman seized an arm and when they lifted him from the ground he str gled like the proverbial wildont caught by tail. As he did so his knife fell clattering on the sidewalk to be picked up and used as ex-hibit "A" against him. They dragged him, still kicking, to the police station where they oaged him to cool off through the night.

still kicking, to the police station where they oaged him to cool off through the sight.

When I left the police station I ran into Mayor Bethune and Chief of Police Chamberlin, also on their way out to follow the crowd.

We found them assembled, as nearly as I can remember, in the open space at the intersection of Hastings and Carrall Streets, near the B.C. Electric station. They were being havinged by speakers who seemed to be raised above the crowd on some precarious footing, since both threw an arm around a telephone pole for support while they gesticulated with the other. But by this time the enthusiasm of the mob had been dampened by reaction se that they took no fire from inflammatory speeches. Tired and surfeited by action they lingered for a while and somewhere around midnight they dispersed one by one to their respective homes. And so the riot ended.

The mayor told me that he had never felt so relieved as he did not know for a while feet. Chief Chamberlin was cool and efficient throughout. It is true that it was reported that on the following day the Chinese armed themselves with all the guns and weapons they could lay their hands on, but it was in fear of a repetition that never came.

The next day I was called up in the police court to give evidence against my Japanese friend who, if he had interrupted had at least so I made my testimony as soft for him as I sould. I said he seemed to be terribly excited and evidently regarded himself as acting in a defensive way.

"Yes, defensive," said Magistrate Williams, notably hard on property but easy on personal offence, and he fined him $10.

I heard some murmuring in the courtroom and as I went out others who were following me loudly damned the magistrate for his lensency. It seemed as if they regarded such punishment for a rebellious Asiatic as something like a pill for an earthquake.
